ANTI-GERMAN SCENES IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

A riot occurred against German shops in the East End, and Police and Territorials were called out to restore order.
It is reported that so many police were injured yesterday night that it is impossible to provide complete protection for alien enemies.
In the House of Commons Mr. Asquith, referring to the question, emphasised that none would be surprised that the progressive violation of the rules of humanity culminating in the sinking of the Lusitania had aroused a feeling of righteous indignation among all classes to which it would be difficult to find a parallel.
He pointed out that the steps hitherto taken with regard to aliens were adequate from the military point of view, and one result of the German atrocities was, unhappily, that it was the innocent who were now in danger of paying for the crimes of others.

It was repulsed with considerable loss to us and heavy loss to the Turks. The enemy's reserves came into the beams of our searchlights, and the French 15th inflicted very heavy losses on them.
The enemy attacked each succeeding night until the 6th inst., with diminishing intensity, and all attacks were easily repulsed.
We made some advance and consolidated our positions. The Turkish dead before the 20th Division were very numerous indeed.
The French gained a very important point on the Left Wing indicating very heavy losses on the enemy by the bayonet.
The warships throughout rendered most valuable assistance.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

HEAVY FIGHTING OVER A LARGE AREA.

Substantial Advance Of The Allies.

LONDON, May 11, 11.40 p.m.
To-day's Paris communiqué says:—
The Germans in Belgium attempted to retake the works captured yesterday but were repulsed.
Our progress northward of Arras continued. We seized the cemetery and then the eastern portion of Carney, also the road leading from Carney to Souchez. We took another 200 prisoners at Carney and captured some machine guns.
We have invested Carney on three fronts, and the German communications are precarious.
German forces motored from Lens to Douai, but did not succeed anywhere. Four strong counter-attacks were smashed by us last night. The German losses were very heavy especially at Loos, Notre-Dame-de-Lorette, Souchez, Neuville. At the last-named place we gained ground and made prisoners. We had taken up to last night over fifty officers.
The Germans last night had a fresh attack at Neuville. They counter-attacked after a violent bombardment but were completely repulsed with very heavy losses. We maintained every position.
The enemy, after throwing two shells into Dunkirk, threw eleven into Berghes, killing twelve persons. Our guns stopped the bombardment.
The French destroyed one and the British two German aeroplanes. The Germans brought down one British.

LONDON, May 12, 2.50 a.m.
The Paris evening communiqué says:—
The Belgians north of Dinant established a bridge-head on the right bank of the river and repulsed violent attacks on Monday night. The Belgians also gained ground south of Dinant.
The British east of Ypres, being attacked with gas, allowed the enemy to advance, but the troops being protected by masks, and then they annihilated the enemy with point blank fire from machine-guns and rifles, as the Germans were advancing in masses.
We considerably extended our successes north of Arras.
A desperate battle along the front at Loos ended in our capturing a large German work and an elaborate system of trenches across the Loos-Vermelle road, and, further south, a redoubt and a chapel at Notre-Dame-de-Lorette which the Germans had transformed into a veritable fortress and had ardently defended for months. It was outwitted, and all the German trenches south of the chapel were captured. Hundreds of bodies were found in the captured position.
After repulsing a German counter-attack, we advanced vigorously, driving closer the investment of the German position at Souchez and Carney, and further threatening their communications.
We captured, after a violent battle, a fortified cemetery at Neuville St. Vaast, which village we now outflank.
The number of German prisoners is constantly increasing.

RUSSIAN RESERVES TURN THE TIDE.

LONDON, May 12.
An official Petrograd communiqué admits that the enemy attacks created an unfavourable situation on the evening of the 9th inst. between the Vistula and the Carpathians, but impetuous attacks by the Russian Reserves against the enemy's Right Wing arrested the German onset and enabled the threatened troops to retire tranquilly to their assigned positions.

A MIXED MEDLEY.

Curious Summary Court Case.

A curious story was told in an action which came before the Police Judge in the Summary Court this morning. Norman Singh, the plaintiff, who keeps a shop at Murray Barracks, sued another Indian named Poo Bux, of No. 19, Kew Road, Old City, for £150, the amount said to have been paid by him to the defendant as the purchase money of two cows which defendant pretended to sell to him, but afterwards wrongfully disposed of. Mr. Dixon, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. J. H. Gardiner for the defendant.

Plaintiff's case, Mr. Dixon said, was that on January 20 he bought two cows from the defendant for £150. Plaintiff paid him, £50 then, and sometime later made up the balance by giving him nine goats and an I.O.U. The cows were left with the defendant to be grazed on his premises, and when plaintiff went for them in March he found that they were gone, defendant having admitted that he had sold them to a Chinese dealer for £150, and he promised to return this amount to the plaintiff on the following day, but when plaintiff called defendant said he had no money.
The defence admitted that the cows were sold to the plaintiff when they were calves, but Mr. Gardiner submitted that when plaintiff found that they were barren and did not give milk he sold them himself to a Chinese butcher for £70. Plaintiff was paid this amount by the butcher, and out of it paid the defendant a sum of £45 which he owed him. Mr. Gardiner added that the purchaser is not only a butcher but a dishonest man, and as he had a large number of other cows to look after at the present time it was impossible for him to attend today.
